THE SYMPOSIUM OF STUDENT SCHOLARS

on April 16, 2020 virtually!

- Presentations will be hosted through Microsoft Teams, an easy-to-use “meeting” platform, giving participants and attendees an interactive, online experience for networking and learning from each other.

- Students can learn more about research and participate in an academic conference remotely at no expense.

- Faculty can integrate the conference into their classes as all coursework has transitioned to remote learning. Students can be encouraged to attend a specific number of sessions related to the course being taught and then complete an assignment related to those sessions. Example assignments include:
  - writing a short reflection on what they learned at the conference
  - making connections between research from the conference and course content
  - critically evaluating research presentations they attend at the conference

- Prizes will be awarded for best presentations by undergraduate and graduate students.
